Grrl Sophia Villarreal-Licona: "How to Treat Your Minority Students"

Do you have trouble interacting with minority students? Does it seem like they are overrunning the schools? They just keep coming, year after year, lowering test scores, and speaking their foreign jibber jabber. Fortunately, the Minority Student Instruction Manual has now been written. (Excerpt)

Kore unveils the official Ingalls web project

Tucson's own Jeremy Ingalls, poet and scholar, now has a website devoted to her letters, travels and works, which include Kore's Selected Poems. Created by Mimi Wheatwind, Deborah Johnson, and Mike Hume, this site is the most authoritative source on the Net for Ingalls. Learn more here. We also recommend you drop by the University of Arizona Poetry Center's Spring 2009 library exhibition, which explores Ingalls' fascination with Asian literature and culture.

Powder the Senate!

At Kore Press we are planting the power of literature in the Senate. During the months of May and June, together with at least 100 of our most ardent fans, we will be raising awareness about the status of women the best way we know how. With every $100 donation to Kore Press, a copy of Powder: Writing by Women in the Ranks, will be sent to a US senator. Powder a senator!

Kore Author Alerts: get 'em while they're hot

If a week sipping wine along California hills and vineyards is your dream of a summer workshop retreat, start now on your application to the Napa Valley Writers' Conference (July 26-July 31). Poet and translator Jane Hirshfield, recipient of the prestigious 2004 Academy Fellowship, will be on the poetry faculty this year.

Been itching for an excuse to travel to the lush Pacific Northwest? We suggest Portland, brimming with arts events, as well as verdure. Check out their Arts & Lectures series this fall. Critic and fiction writer Lydia Davis, known for her cutting-edge style, will be on the lineup (Nov. 5).

2007 Kore First Book Award winner Spring Ulmer's new book of essays, The Age of Virtual Reproduction, is due out in June from Essay Press. Through investigations of executions in Rwanda and meditations on old photographs, Ulmer poses the question of how to access the "real" in our age of emotional and moral numbness. Read more here.

Summer Workshop: Apply Now!

We are female-identified and trans individuals, ages 14-18, participating in the Grrls Literary Activism Project to find our writer's voice, read out loud, work with photography, and present our words and ideas to the public in "art action." Here's our blog.

Summer Session: June 1-12, M-F 9am-1pm

Peace Happening

From Peace Day to Memorial Day, Kore Press will be at Maynard's long table in the old train depot for "Words and Birds, a Time Piece for Peace." Come join us for beverages, fold paper cranes, and/or write poems for peace (without using the word)!

Address: 400 N Toole Ave
Dates: May 17-May 24, 5-6 pm
